

The Dangerous Forest Fire

Yesterday, Harry and Jack saw a forest fire at the countryside. The scene was very frightening.

At first Harry and Jack were merely having a picnic. They were eating delicious sandwiches when Harry suddenly smelt smoke. He said, "Hey, Jack! Can you smell the smoke?" Jack nodded warily and glanced at the surroundings. There was some smoke behind a large oak tree. Jack and Harry were very frightened because they also heard crackling and sizzling now. There might be a forest fire soon! Jack said, clearly frightened, "Let's go before the wood and grass start to burn!" Therefore, the boys scurried along the road as fast as they could.

Trees burst into flames suddenly, and wood crackled and burned. Both of the boys felt a hot sensation. "The fire is going to burn down the forest!" Jack shouted, terrified. "Look! There's a house over there!" Harry pointed at a small cottage over the hills. Jack and Harry rushed towards the wooden house, hoping to find help. Jack knocked on the door carefully. A woman opened the door and Jack immediately said, "There's a forest fire outside and it's really dangerous there. Can you help us?"

The woman called the firefighters for help through the emergency number. Jack and Harry borrowed some goggles and a wet towel and they stayed at the little house, waiting for the firefighters to come and put out the fire. At last, the boys and the woman were rescued from the forest fire and they were all safe.

This morning, Jack and Harry went back to the countryside. All that remained were a few burned and snapped twigs and fallen branches. They wondered how long it would take for the trees and flowers to grow back. At least they escaped from the fire.
